

PROFESSOR ICEBREAKER BINGO

Created by Joe Bisz (joebisz.com)

- Greet a colleague with a statement.
- If the colleague says “Yes,” she signs her name in any bingo space containing that statement.
- If the colleague says “No,” try another statement--or another colleague!
- HOWEVER: You can only use the same colleague’s signature twice per board. Also, the same colleague cannot sign two spaces that contain the same greeting.
- “BINGO!”: A BINGO requires a “Straight” (4 signatures in a row, in any direction, including diagonally) or a “Flush” (4 signatures on spaces with the same image, anywhere on the board).
When you get a BINGO, the game does not end! Flip your board to the other side, and keep playing on your second board.
- WINNING THE GAME: If you are the first to finish 2 Boards, call out “I got 2 Bingos!”, and you win a prize! (Remember: only 1 Bingo per board.)

Board B

You are pursuing a field of interest that is new to you. 	You don't have a lot of personal boundaries with your students. 	You have the creeping feeling that your department is getting too big to manage. 	You could easily spend 5+ hours obsessing over or preparing a recipe.
You serve on a department committee, and have ideas for how to improve a few things. 	You own more than 30 pairs of shoes/boots. 	You believe that the Socratic method of questioning has great value in the classroom. 	You believe the secret to enjoying conferences is not to go.
You maintain a strong authoritarian role as instructor. 	You are pursuing a field of interest that is new to you. 	You own more than 30 pairs of shoes/boots. 	You have met one or more of the closest people in your life at your college.
You believe writing critical theory is closely related to writing fiction, poetry, and other creative writing. 	You have met one or more of the closest people in your life at your college. 	You always spend 1 night a week (or more) enjoying performances/nightlife. 	You don't have a lot of personal boundaries with your students.

PERSONAL
LIFE

PROFESSIONAL
LIFE

DEPARTMENTAL
LIFE

TEACHING
LIFE